

Abstract

This paper examines the online discourse of opponents and proponents of the Helvetica and Arial typefaces through linguistics methodologies.

The foundation of this paper comes from the Semiology theory that linguistic signs can be used to analyse non-linguistic signs. This paper examines the non-linguistic sign (typography) through the linguistic sign (discourse on typography), analysing the data through a multi-methodological approach.